The Corporate Crisis: Disagreement between Ethics and Neoclassical Economics

Alfonso Maraví Lindo*

ABSTRACT
The present is an investigation work that offers a panoramic vision of how, with the passing years, it has been produced a breach almost insurmountable among the political economy and the ethical principles that have to regulate the human activities developed inside such environment, with the disastrous consequences that it has brought it for all society, mainly in these times of globalization, where any action or economic transaction can rebound seriously in the most remote places of where that it took place. Also, it is exposed the importance that has the exercise of the freedom for the development of the societies - that are considered as the fundamental of the human task - freedom that ultimately it constitutes the generating element of the real conditions of life throughout the history.

Key words: ethics, corporate crisis, political economy, social responsibility.